HISTORY

The history of the company Yugoimport-SDPR J.P. started on 18 June 1949 with the Decree of the Prime Minister of the FPRY Government and the Minister of National Defense, Marshal Josip Broz Tito. The company for international trade "Jugoimport" was founded on 27 June 1949 with the primary goal to import raw materials and components for the needs of the local defense industry.

In time, the production capacities of the Yugoslav defense industry exceeded the domestic demands, thus entering the world market became economically inevitable. Its export activities started in 1953. The latest Western standards for armament and defense equipment were adopted owing to the intensive cooperation with the leading Western countries during the 1950s.

The period from the end of the 1950s to the end of the 1980s was characterized by a remarkable indigenous development of a wide range of defense products for all three military services, which contributed to the increase of the potential offer, both with the respect to its content and scope. Thus, Yugoimport was earning billions of dollars each year from its export activities in the 1980s. At the time, the official statistics ranked Yugoimport as one of the ten most significant exporters of defense equipment in the world.

Once the Act on the Public Enterprise Yugoimport-SDPR J.P. was adopted in 1996, the company acquired its present name Yugoimport-SDPR J.P. after undergoing several restructuring processes.
